Descriptive Title Homilary Text title Homilary

Abstract

This richly illuminated fourteenth-century German homilary is particularly interesting for its rare bifolium of drawings bound in at the front of the book. The headgear worn by the nuns in the drawings is characteristic of Cistercensian and Premostratensian nuns in northern Germany as early as circa 1320. Evidence for dating and localization is also found in the manuscript's relationship with a second homilary in the Bodleian Library (Oxford, Bodleian Library, Ms. Douce 185). Despite minor codicological differences-page layout. textblock dimensions, and ruling--it seems likely that the two homilaries were composed as a set in one scriptorium. The drawings at the beginning of the Walters manuscript were inspired by miniatures within the book and are very similar to the style of Master of Douce 185, recently identified as a collaborator of the Willehalm Master. Although the Walters homilary lacks internal evidence for localization, it can be attributed to the lower Rhine on the basis of general affinities between work of this region and English art. The Walters homilary is stylistically close to the small ivory book illustrated with fourteen paintings of the Passion in the Victoria and Albert Museum (London, Victoria and Albert Museum, inv. no.11-1872), which has Westphalian and north German characteristics. Palette, figural drawings, the use of checkered spandrels, large ivy-leaf terminals, and ape marginalia in the Walters homilary are also close to fragments of an antiphonary from Westphalia scattered in German collections (Düsseldorf, Universitätsbibliothek, Ms. D. 37a, b, c and Hamm, Städtisches Gustav-Lübcke-Museum, Mss 5474-5476). A second group of stylistically related manuscripts can be found in a two-volume antiphonary from the Dominican nunnery of Paradise near Soest (Düsseldorf, Universitätsbibliothek, Mss. D.7 and D.9).

Contents fols. 1r - 283v:

Title: Homilary

Contents: The homilary covers the period from the vigil of Easter through Pentecost.

Hand note: Large and well-separated Gothic textualis of a style fashionable in the late thirteenth century

Decoration note: In addition to four drawings now bound in at the front of the book, the manuscript contains four full-page miniatures, one of one-column width, six smaller miniatures set into the text, and twenty-four historiated initials of varying size, some of them filling most of a page. The manuscript also contains fifty decorated initials and versals in red and blue with filigree penwork, as well as red rubrics. Fols. 4r-99v contain band borders around three or four sides of each page and in the intercolumniation. The grounds are decorated in gold or blue with delicate foliate patterns: palmette, vines with profile leaves or ivy, dragons with vine tails, rosettes and other patterns. Fols. 20r and 51r are decorated with hart hunts, fol. 22 v with oak leaves, and fol. 62v with battling apes. Fols. 4r-11r are decorated with trilobed arches with turrets; fols. 11v, 52r-59v are decorated with round gold arches with turrets; fols. 68r-83v and fols. 92r-99v are decorated with round red and olive arches with turrets. Part of an illuminated leaf has been cut into strips and used to reinforce the joint of the binding. The strip has been removed from the binding and now is housed in the manuscript's box.

fols. 1r - 2v:

Title: Sermon of St. Augustine

Rubric: (Fol. 1v) Tam jocundam solemnitatem tam miram veri luminis claritatem tam splendidam gratiae celsitudinem omnis lexus agnoscere omnis aetas in mente habere omnis debet conditio suscipere. Nescire enim

Text note: The rubric repeats the lines that terminate the Sermon of St. Augustine on fol. 23r. The verses are also found in chapter 27 of Rupert of Deutz's De Divinis Officiis.

Decoration note: This bifolium with drawings is a later addition to the manuscript. Fol. 1r, historiated initial "D," 9 lines. The initial ends with a dragon tail; St. Mark holds a book standing on a lion; it is based on the initial at fol. 24r. Fol. 1v, historiated initial "D," 8 lines. The initial has a dragon tail and leaves. St. Gregory seated holds a book on his lap and bestows a blessing with his right hand; the figure of the saint is adapted form the illumination at fol. 24v. Fol. 2r, Virgin holding the Child on her left arm and a globe in her right hand under a baldachin; the illumination is based on fol. 23r. Fol. 2v represents the Resurrection. Christ steps out of the sepulcher holding the banner on his left hand while blessing with his right. Two angels remove the lid of the grave while a third angel holding a censer flies on Christ's right. In front of the grave, four soldiers are sleeping. On the left margin of the page, nuns pray under an architecture while looking at the scene. The illumination is based on those at fols. 23v and 46r.
