Descriptive Title History of the Destruction of Troy

Text title History of the Destruction of Troy with a Latin Poem on

Drunkenness

Author Authority name: Colonne, Guido delle, 13th cent.

As-written name: Guido de Coluna Supplied name: Guido delle Colonne Known as: Guido de Columnis Known as: Guido de Columna

Abstract This manuscript, probably made in the second half of the fourteenth century, bears witness to a long and lively history of use and collection. It contains a prose Latin history of the fall of Troy written in 1287 by Guido delle Colonne, whose account was enormously popular for several centuries after its composition and influenced, directly or in translation, the works of Chaucer and Shakespeare. This particular manuscript was likely made at a university for scholarly use, and its margins are filled with erudite notes from the fifteenth century. Many different individuals owned and signed the manuscript in its first centuries; one even wrote a Latin poem on drunkenness in one of its blank final pages. The manuscript eventually found its way into the hands of the notorious manuscript collector, Sir Thomas Phillipps.

Binding The binding is not original.

Nineteenth-century binding, English; light brown calf with narrow decorative roll around edges and on spine; title stamped and gilt on spine; multicolored, comb-marbled

pastedowns

Provenance Created in England, second half of fourteenth century; perhaps made in a university scriptorium (e.g. Oxford or Cambridge)

Waler dei Klerla (?), fourteenth and fifteenth century (?); identified by very faint inscription on fol. 109r

No. 38 in a fifteenth-century (?) English library; numbered in top margin of fol. 1r

Homofredus Taylor, sixteenth century(?); inscribed twice on fol. 108v, along with the name "Atwodde"

Robertus Nebbus, sixteenth century (?); inscription on 109r: "Robertus Nebbus me possidet" (Robert Nebbus owns me)

Tailerus, sixteenth century (?); above inscription by Nebbus is written, "liber loquitur;" below is written, "veritas loquitur: Nequequam Nebbus te possidet, sed Tailerus" (The truth speaks: It is not Nebbus that owns you, but Tailerus)

Edward Conway (d. 1631), ownership signature on fol. 109v

Thomas Thorpe, bookseller, London, early nineteenth century; Thorpe's notation on upper right verso of first flyleaf; marked "Thorpe 1836" in pencil on center of the page (by Phillipps); his catalog no. 293 on verso of second flyleaf

Sir Thomas Phillipps, bought in 1836 from Thorpe; cat. no. 9409; bookplate removed, but number remains on spine; "Phillipps Ms." written in pencil at the center of the verso of the first flyleaf, with number erased

Sold at auction (Sothebys) by Thomas Fenwick (grandson of Phillipps) between 1893 and 1919; his inspection mark in interior upper corner of the verso of the first flyleaf after the manuscript with date 1893

Henry Walters, Baltimore, acquired before 1931

Acquisition

Walters Art Museum, 1931, by Henry Walters' bequest
